The police judge of Des Moines today decided that slot machines are gambling devices and ordered a lot of them destroyed under the lowa law. The cases have been pending some time and have caused a great deal of trouble. Last winter a large number of slot machines of various kinds were placed in cigar stores and elsewhere, and finally one of the justices of the peace took up the matter and had the machines gathered in. Warrants have been issued for the arrest of one C. V. Hamilton, said to be of Chicago, on a charge of embezzlement made by owners of several of the horses which participated in the races this week in Marshalltown. Hamilton came to the race meeting a stranger, but seemed to know all about horses and racing and was made one of the judges of the race one day in the absence of another. He gained the confidence of all the leading horse owners, and on the last day four of the owners put up a little job to beat the bookmakers and others and entrusted their money to Hamilton to be placed. Hamilton was onto the right combination and won every time. He had taken in about $300 by evening for the benefit of the four horse owners, and then they set out to divide the money among them, but Hamilton could not be found. He had hired a team and had gone to the next station to take the train out of the state. The four horse owners who trusted the stranger too far were I. J. Edwards, Table Rock, Neb.; T. T.
